Resumen: En el presente artículo llevamos a cabo la edición del ritual de ordenación del Salmista según dos manuscritos del siglo XIV. Ofrecemos una descripción completa de los manuscritos y de su contexto arqueológico.

Abstract: In the present article, we edit the rite of ordination of the Psalmist according to two manuscripts from the fourteenth century. We will give a full description of the manuscripts and their archaeological context.

Palabras clave: Textos litúrgicos coptos. Textos copto-árabes. Historia medieval.

Key words: Coptic liturgical texts. Coptic-Arabic texts. Medieval history.

Introduction

The psalmist is one of the minor (priestly) orders attested very early in the Egyptian Church.<sup>1</sup> This Order is mentioned in the Nomocanon<sup>2</sup> of Ibn al-‘Assal (1238 A.D.) that deals with the ranks of sub-deacon, reader, psalmist, porter and deaconess. Although some scholars suggest that the order of the psalmist did not exist in the thirteenth century<sup>3</sup>, the text presented here attests that the order of the psalmist did in fact exist at this time.

In his monumental book about the Coptic Church, O.H. E. Burmester speaks about the sacrament of the Holy Orders, but he does not include the Rite of the ordination of the psalmist.<sup>4</sup> In addition, it is noteworthy to mention that Burmester does not even mention the rite of ordination of the psalmist<sup>5</sup> in his edition of the Ordination Rites (a posthumous work).

Psalmist in the Medieval writers

Unlike Gabriel V<sup>6</sup> and Ibn al-Sabā<sup>7</sup> who do not mention this order, only Ibn Kabar<sup>8</sup> comments on the rite of ordination of the psalmist in his encyclopaedia the Lamp of Darkness,<sup>9</sup> and yet although he does not provide the text of the prayer of ordination, he gives some important details that are absent from our manuscripts.

Here is the text of Ibn Kabar:

The psalmist, who is the one who sings and who will (also) be the reader, (stands) before the bishop, and with head uncovered, genuflects, after which with head bowed, three litanies will be completed upon him:

First litany: "We ask and beseech You O our Master"
<Second litany>: "O God who is great and beneficent"
<Third litany>: "O Master, Lord, and God almighty"

Following these prayers, let (the psalmist) kiss the altar and (hand of the) bishop,<sup>11</sup> and (exchange a holy kiss with) those in attendance; after which the bishop will make a sign of the cross, saying: “Glory and honour to the Holy Trinity. Peace and edification to the Church of God. Amen.”

The original edition of the Rites of Ordination<sup>12</sup> by Athanasius, metropolitan of Beni Sueif did not include this rite; however, the new edition provides the Arabic translation.<sup>13</sup> The only other edition that includes this rite is the edition of Tukhi.<sup>14</sup>

Manuscripts

In this text, we will use the two oldest manuscripts known to mention the rite, in addition to the edition of Tukhi referenced above.

The manuscript Liturgy 1 from the Monastery of Saint Anthony

Pontifical

- 1) Ordination services of the reader to the patriarch.
- 2) Consecration of the fonts.
- 3) Consecration of all the vessels of the altar.
- 4) Consecration of a hermit.
- 5) Consecration of the relics of the saints.
- 6) Consecration of the Myron (Chrysm).
- 7) Mystagogia.
- 8) Preparation of the Myron by anba Yū'annis the eightieth (patriarch) known as Ibn Qiddīs.
- 9) Preparation of the Myron by Anbā Theodosius the seventy-ninth (patriarch).
- 10) Consecration of a restored church.
- 11) Prayer for the portable altar (in different handwriting).

97 folios + 6 blank folios, dated 7 Bābah 1050 AM (1334 AD). The name of the scribe is Anbā Ibrāhīm bishop of the diocese of Koskam. The sponsor is the priest Gabriel (Għubriyāl) and his nephew in the Monastery of Saint Philotheus, known as the Monastery of Al-Naṣṭūr near Birkat al-Habaš outside of Miṣr. The manuscript was donated by Anbā Athanasius in the year 1504 AM (1788 AD), and another by Timothy, metropolitan of Jerusalem in 1629 AM (1913 AD).

The abovementioned manuscript was copied during the patriarchate of Benjamin II<sup>21</sup> who was the 82nd Alexandrian patriarch (1327-1339). He is one of the less known patriarchs in the history of the Coptic Church and his biography was authored by an anonymous writer<sup>22</sup>.

Nevertheless, he is known for the restoration of several churches; such as the Church of Saint Shenouda in Old Cairo<sup>23</sup>, the Monastery of Saint Bishoi<sup>24</sup> and the Monastery of Saint Macarius.<sup>25</sup> We may assume that this manuscript was copied for the consecration of the restored churches. The manuscript was found in the collection of the Monastery of Saint Philotheus known as the Monastery of al-Nastûr.<sup>26</sup> It is noteworthy that two other manuscripts from the same monastery are in the Bibliothèque Nationale de Paris.

The foliations of this manuscript, we find writing in modern pencil continued in Arabic throughout the manuscript. In our text (which belowmentioned) we have another foliation in Coptic uncial, that starts with ḥ.

Our text occurs in folios ፩፭ verso and ፩፮ recto

“In the name of God.

He who cares for this holy book that contains the consecration and the concoction of the Myron and all that follows, the righteous man, who is holy to God, and walks in all the commandments of the Lord blamelessly, the good father, who is full of the grace of the Holy Spirit, the priest John (Yühannâ) who is the minister of the Church of the Lady Madonna, the pure holy Virgin, Mary, in the Church of al-Mu‘allaqah. May the Lord preserve his life for many peaceful years. May all his enemies be subdued under his feet, through the prayers of the pure God-Bearer and all the sublime angels and those who have pleased and are pleasing to the Lord of all the descendants of Adam. Amen!

Dated in the month of Baramhât in the year 1080 of the pure martyrs. May God grant us their blessings.

For the library of the Virgin, an endowment for the Church of the Lady Madonna at Mu‘allaqah”.

(Written with a recent hand) the number of the written folios is 147.

This manuscript was copied during the patriarchate of John XI<sup>29</sup> the eighty-fifth patriarch of Alexandria (1363-1369). The biography of John XI occupies only three lines in the History of the Patriarchs.<sup>30</sup> He is named as Father Yühannâ al-Mu’taman al-Shâmî, thus denoting his Syrian origin. He was a man of learning and great virtue. We know nothing of his monastic life or his affiliation with one of the recognized Coptic monasteries. He ascended the papal throne during the reign of the Bahri Mamlûk Sultân, al-Ashraf Sha‘bân (1363-1377), and thus we can assume that his patriarchate was a peaceful one.

According to Nakhlah,<sup>31</sup> and Myuser,<sup>32</sup> the Ms 286 Lit (Patriarchal library) mentioned that John XI (Yu’annis al-Mu’taman) consecrated the Myron in the year 1085 AM (1369 AD) and was assisted by twenty bishops.

Our text occurs in folio ፩ verso and ፪ recto. The edition of the Tukhi changed the rubrics relating to the monastery and ‘Patriarch’ is replaced by ‘Bishop’.<sup>33</sup>

Archaeological context

As the pontifical is a rite performed only by a bishop or patriarch, we would hence expect that the manuscript to be located in a patriarchal church.

Ms A was written for the Monastery of Philotheus. This monastery was in the possession of the patriarchs, as several Coptic patriarchs and bishops of Misr were buried in the adjoining cemetery: Zechariah, Athanasius III, John VII, Theodosius II and John IX.<sup>34</sup> The monks of the Monastery of Saint Antony were a powerful force in determining the history of the Coptic Church for about two centuries following its repopulation (in the 16th century). Eight Antonian monks in unbroken succession became patriarchs; from John VI (1676-1718) to Cyril IV (1854-1861).<sup>35</sup> One of the readers is Athanasius of Saint Antony's Monastery who later became Athanasius bishop of Abu Tig. He was a famous restorer of manuscripts; something he did up until a few months before his episcopal ordination.<sup>36</sup> In Addition, one of the readers was the future Cyril IV.<sup>37</sup>

Ms CM was in the possession of the Church of al-Mu'allaqah which was also one of the patriarchal residences for a period of time.<sup>38</sup> It seems this prayer may have Sahidic origins, as γαθη should be γατη.<sup>39</sup> This paper highlights once more the importance of the Liturgical text.

almighty, the Father of our Lord and our God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. We ask and beseech You, O lover of mankind, for Your servant who is standing before You, who flees<sup>42</sup> from before Your Universal and Apostolic church. Enlighten him to the sweetness of Your holy words. Grant him to sing to You with understanding the spiritual odes. May he be worthy to start in faith and worship You in wisdom and purity.

Purify him, bless him, fill him with Your fear. Keep him through Your angelic might. Make Him rich in all good honour and perfect gifts.
In order that he may live according to Your holy and blessed will (so that he may be) pleasing to You, so that he may progress in what is great and perfect by Your Holy Spirit. Through the intercession of Your only-Begotten Son our Lord Jesus, Christ to whom...
